Construction

"We're leading the way with communications to remote building sites and we've used NewSat for a long time to ensure our clients' needs are met. We work together to come up with solutions to suit us and it's effective because NewSat are responsive and we value the communication and relationship between us".

John Nixon, Managing Director – Nixon Communications

NewSat has the experience to engineer the most efficient, cost-effective solution, tailored to your specific environment.

The remote or temporary locations of construction sites require satellite communications for operational and business functionality. Temporary sites can often present challenges in terms of remote monitoring and management and can increase operational costs. NewSat design, engineer and tailor their satellite communication solutions to every construction site to ensure companies can work productively and efficiently no matter where their sites are located. This also provides head office with increased access and management across their diverse and temporary construction sites. NewSat not only provides innovative, fast and reliable communication solutions for construction sites but also ensures maintenance and support is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.
